FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

Stanzas written on hearing a Robin sing.

Oh! if grateful praises fire thee,
Warble on thy woodnotes gay,
Or if love to Him inspire thee,
Wake for Him thy purest lay.

Tune thy throat in welcome praises,
When the night resumes her reign,
And when morn with glory blazes,
Pour to Him a grateful strain.

He who smiles, and all creation
Owns at once the gladdening hour,
He who frowns, and desolation
Chases for the festive hour.

He who smiles, and spring returning,
Lights you wildwood plain with green,
Gilds the silver dews of morning,
Spangle bright the verdant scene.

Haste thee, Bob, the Lark is weeping,
Autumn's last expiring ray,
Have thee far, or Winter sweeping,
Freezes e'en thy airy way.

But when spring with smiling mountains,
Gently decks the budding year,
And commands her babbling fountains
Heave their swelling torrents clear:

When she rolls with growing splendors,
Yonder radient orb above,
And when winter's hand surrenders
Like the melting palm of love.

Man alone, so dead to feeling,
Points at thee his poison'd dart,
And compassion's tide congealing,
Death commands thy joyous heart.

Luckiest bird, if Spring delight thee,
Seek you distant forest wide,
Pensive pity will not slight thee,
She will o'er thy fate preside.

FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

An angel left the realms of radiant light,
And downward to our planet bent his flight;
His object man to see, to investigate
His virtues, crimes, and subsequent state.

At morn he left high heaven, and 'ere the sun
Had told that toil his daily task was done,
On earth the angel rested; and began
To scrutinize the ways of little man.

He saw a tyrant seated on a throne,
The air around was rent with many a groan,
From "injur'd worth and innocence oppress'd,"
From fathers ruin'd, and from wives distress'd.

Poor worm, indignantly the angel said,
Soon will that regal brow in death be laid;
These sighs that now are borne upon the air
Against thee at heaven's bar will then appear.

He saw a son from an aged parent wipe
The tears drawn forth by poverty's rude gripe,
Smoothing his passage through a world of woe,
'Till death should ease his sufferings here below.

The youth had fled from pleasure to attend
A father's bed, and o'er his sick couch bend!
The angel smil'd, and said, to thee is given
Kind filial youth, a home in yonder heaven.

He saw a female dress'd in silk and gold,
Her form was cast in nature's choicest mould,
He said, a sister angel sure is this,
Some wand'rer from the realms of endless bliss!

He look'd again, he drew'd a tear and sigh'd,
For she a frail one was, to vice allied;
Alas, he said, 'tis pity one so fair
The pangs of sorrow should forever bear.

He saw a warrior fall in holy fight,
Whose spirit upward took its heavenly flight;
Joy sparkled in the angel's glistening eye,
For angels smile when men for freedom die.

He saw a poor man by the pound despis'd,
But who religion's path had clearly priz'd,
Who scorn'd to break stern virtue's sacred laws,
To gain a world's unhallowed applause.

The angel gave his benison, and said
Unrighteous one, of man be not afraid,
Heaven would be vacant if the lowly here
Receiv'd not entrance and a welcome there.

He saw a host of Potentates combin'd
To stop the progress of the human mind;
Unhappy men, he cried, ye toil in vain,
Heaven hath decreed that reason's light shall reign!

He went to Judah's land, to Calvary,
Where a kind Saviour died mankind to free;
Unto the mount with holy awe he crept,
And bath'd in sorrow there fell down and wept!

'Tir'd of the earth, (it now was almost even',)
He spread his golden wings and soar'd to heaven;
Recorded all he'd seen, and sigh'd to tell,
That sin and sorrow still on earth did dwell.

FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

MELANCHOLY.

Who can describe the painful feeling,
When the soul's bereav'd of rest,
And dismal gleams of torture stealing,
Wound the tender feeling breast.

Oh! vain would soft compassion paint,
Each gloom and agonizing care,
Or pity sooth each woe's complaint,
Which rends the bosom of despair.

For when dark sorrow veils the heart,
In mournful melancholy gloom,
What tongue can sweet relief impart,
Or pity—sorrow's breast relume.

A feeble power on earth remains,
To heal the bitter pangs of grief,
Where darkness and where sorrow reigns,
'Tis heaven alone can give relief.

FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

The following is a copy of a fragment, presented to me by a valetudinarian, to whose misfortunes are superadded much learning and talent. I like the sentiment and think it would contribute to the Ode. I shall appropriate the original

PARASOL.

This Parasol accept from me,
From too much sun thy face to free;
For, as a face so sweet as thine,
The sun has scarce a right to shine.
Thy conduct angels must approve,
Thy form is such that all must love:
But what's thy form to thy pure heart,
Where ev'ry virtue finds a part. J. A. E.

SABBATH MORNING.

We should endeavor to be contented with every thing, every state, which it is not in our power to remedy. There is no condition so miserable, in which if we please, we cannot find something to be grateful for many sources of contentment. A querulous temper should be immediately resisted; with a little self-command we may in time acquire a habit of patient endurance.—Why should we allow ourselves to complain without some prospect of benefit. We cannot hope always for sympathy, and there is danger of rendering ourselves more unhappy, in consequence of wearying others with the repetitions of our petty vexations. After all if we would examine ourselves carefully, we should find, that many subjects of complaint were imaginary. Some think their numerous cares a burthen, and murmur that so much of their time must be occupied about trifles, but if they are necessary, they should in the performance of them think themselves in the way of duty, and repine not. Let such reflect, that perhaps they are happier, more useful, than they would be without cares. There are few, we believe, who have serious cause of lamenting that their time is too much occupied.—Any innocent employment is better than idleness, and the man who is constantly engaged will seldom be unhappy. If we cannot find any thing for our hands to do, we may always turn our eyes inward on our own mind, and find profitable employment. We may give to the poor and afflicted some of our hours of leisure. Ought we not to be cheerfully submissive at all times, and under all circumstances to the will of our heavenly Father! Let us strive to be contented and grateful from inclination, as well as duty. People are apt to give indulgence to their grief, without making sufficient efforts to control their feelings. We do not know what we are capable of effecting, till we make and persevere in the attempt. So much has been done by our Creator to make us happy, that it seems like disobeying his will to yield to depression. The christian should present an example of cheerfulness, if it were only to convince others, that he is possessed of a belief and of hopes, which support him in every condition. Be not alarmed if you are called by some insensible. You will be thought so only by those who are ignorant of the "peace which passeth understanding," and which a belief in christianity can alone give.—What are all the pleasures, the vanities of this world, compared with the cheering hopes of the christian!

DAYS OF OLD.

Forty years ago—Literature meant learning, and was supported by common sense. Refined nonsense had no advocates, and was pretty generally kicked out of doors.

Forty years ago—men of property could labour and wear homespun to church.—Women spin and weave, make butter and cheese, whose husbands were worth thousands.

Forty years ago—there were but few merchants in the country—few insolvent debtors, and them very rarely imprisoned for debt.

Forty years ago—the young ladies of the first respectability learned music, but it was the humming of the wheel, and learned the necessary steps of dancing in following it. Their forte piano was a loom, their parasol was a broom, and their novels the Bible.

Forty years ago—the young gentlemen hoed corn, chopped wood at the door, and went to school in the winter to learn reading, writing and arithmetic.

Forty years ago—there were no such things as balls in the summer, and but few in the winter, except snow-balls.

Forty years ago—if a mechanic promised to do your work, you might depend on his word; the thing would be done.

Forty years ago—when a mechanic had finished his work, he was immediately paid for it: and

Forty years ago—PRINTERS were paid, and were enabled to pay their debts.—What a falling off!

FROM BORDLEY'S HUSBANDRY.

General Cautions in Country Cookery.

Soups are never to be filled up, or have even a drop of water, hot or cold, added; and are never to boil briskly. They are not to be long over the fire, simmering rather than boiling.—And soups having roots or herbs, are to have the meat laid on the pan, with a good lump of butter. The herbs and roots being cut small are laid on the meat. It is then covered close, and set on a very slow fire.—This draws out all the virtue of the roots and herbs, and turns out a good gravy with a fine flavor, from what it would be if the water were put in at first. When the gravy is almost dried up, then fill your pan with water; and when it begins to boil, take off the fat.—Never boil fish, but only simmer, till done enough. Beef quick boiled is thereby hardened; simmer or slow boil it, in not too much water. Cover and boil slow as possible, skimming the water clean. It is the worst of faults to boil any meats fast. In baking pies, a quick oven, well closed, prevents falling of the crust.

Wasteful or indolent people overlook calculation: and too many may think but little of the wholesome and nourishing qualities of food.—But there are well informed and most actively good men recommending to the world the results of much inquiry and experience therein. However lightly may be the thought of a cent on a single meal of victuals, yet, when the sum of a year's meals is calculated, for a person, a family, and a nation, it becomes striking and important. A cent for a meal amounts to three cents a day.

One person, at three cents a day, saves in the year, $11.

One family of five persons, $55.

A nation of five millions of people, 55,000,000 dollars.

The cent thus saved by the good house-wife, on every plentiful meal of the wholesomest food, would be sufficent for maintaining the most desperate war by the freemen of America, in defence of their country against the wiles and violences of the great enlightened world!

THE SHEPHERD'S DOG

A shepherd, who inhabited one of those valleys or glens which intersect the Grampian mountains, in one of his excursions to look after his flock, happened to carry along with him one of his children, an infant of three years old. This is not an unusual practice among the Highlanders, who accustom their children from their earliest infancy to endure the rigors of the climate. After traversing his pastures for some time, attended by his dog, the shepherd found himself under the necessity of ascending a summit at some distance to have a more extensive view of his range. As the ascent was too fatiguing for the child, he left him on a small plain at the bottom, with strict injunctions not to stir from it till his return. Scarcely, however had he gained the summit, when the horizon was darkened by one of those impenetrable mists which frequently descend so rapidly amid these mountains, as in the space of a few minutes almost to turn day to night. The anxious father instantly hastened back to find his child: but owing to the unusual darkness, and his own trepidation, he unfortunately missed his way in the descent:—After a fruitless search of many hours, he discovered that he had reached the bottom of the valley, and was near his own cottage. To renew the search that night was equally fruitless and dangerous, he was therefore compelled to go home, although he had lost both his child and his dog, who had attended him faithfully for many years. Next morning, by break of day, the shepherd, accompanied by a band of his neighbors, set out in search of his child; but after a day spent in fruitless fatigue, he was at last compelled by the approach of night to descend from the mountain. On returning to his cottage, he found that the dog which he had lost the day before, had been home and on receiving a piece of cake, had instantly gone off again. For several successive days the shepherd renewed the search of his child, and still, on returning home disappointed in the evening, he found that the dog had been home, and on receiving his usual allowance of cake, had instantly disappeared. Struck with this singular circumstance, he remained at home one day; and when the dog, as usual, departed with his piece of cake, he resolved to follow him, and find out the cause of this strange procedure. The dog led the way to a cataract at some distance from the spot where the shepherd left his child. The banks of the cataract are almost joined and yet separated by an abyss of immense depth, presented that appearance which so often astonishes and appals the travellers that frequent the Grampian mountains. Down one of those ragged, and almost perpendicular descents, the dog began, without hesitation, to make his way, and at last disappeared by entering into a cave; the mouth of which was almost level with the torrent. The shepherd with difficulty followed: but, on entering the cave, what were his emotions, when he beheld his infant eating with much satisfaction the cake which the dog had just brought him; while the faithful animal stood by, eyeing his young charge with the utmost complacency! From the situation in which the child was found, it appeared that he had wandered to the brink of the precipice, and then either fallen or scrabbled down till he reached the cave. The dog by means of his scent had traced him to the spot; and afterwards prevented him from starving by giving up to him his own daily allowance. He appears never to have quitted the child by night or day, except when it was necessary to go for food; and then was always seen running at full speed to and from the cottage.

MISERIES.

To be compelled to listen to the story of an honest man who has been unfortunate, and not to possess the means of relieving his distress.—A full heart and an empty pocket!

To be dunned by a wretch who stands before you with each fist resting upon money in his pockets; while you are full of honour, but empty of cash! feeling a painful desire to kick him down stairs, but constrained to soothe and to treat him with courtesy for the sake of those who look to you for bread.—Oh misery most refined!

Passing along the street in attendance upon a lady who speaks so loud as to leave you in a confusion of doubts, to know whether she is addressing the world or yourself—speaking to the public, or mildly replying to your private ear.—No small misery.

At an exhibition, to be seated behind the portentous skreen of a Leghorn, or the total eclipse of a dandy's dozen capes, and compelled to stretch your neck another joint—looking ever afterwards as if you had been hanged!

Possessing a nice "musical ear," and to be doomed by unpitying custom, to listen to your favourite song murdered by some tasteless owl, with a coffee-mill voice!—How must a professed amateur feel under such circumstances!

Trudging along beneath the burning glare of an August sun, to be blinded by dust: especially if it proceeds from the wheels of a coach bearing on its airy springs a man whom you feel convinced better deserves the most conspicuous place in the cart of Jack Ketch!—Money, like screws, will raise the heaviest substances.

While in the act of sitting down to a comfortable tete-a-tete with your wife, over a delicious repast of oysters, the child, who had been quietly cradled, suddenly wakes from a sound sleep, and by its incessant squalling, mars all your anticipated enjoyment. How must an epicure feel in such a dilemma.

FROM ORIGOM'S "YEAR IN EUROPE."

BARCLAY'S BREWERY.—The directors of this establishment, to whom I was introduced by a letter from one of the Barclay's, put me in the way of seeing its various parts, and communicated such information as I wished respecting its extent and operations. If any private concern in England, or in the world, is entitled to the epithet of vastness, this is one. It covers about eight acres of ground, and manufactured last year 340,000 barrels of 36 gallons each. The buildings which contain the vats themselves, are enormous. The largest of the latter contain each 4000 barrels. The average number of vats is nearly one hundred.—A steam engine of twenty-two horse power is employed in driving the machinery, and about two hundred men are engaged in the various works of the establishment: while it is supposed that the number of persons, dependent upon it without, in the sale and transportation of the beer, is three or four thousand. The three coppers in which the beer is boiled, hold each 150 barrels.—Twenty five gentlemen once dined in one of them, after which fifty of the workmen got in and regaled themselves. One hundred and ninety pounds of beef steaks, were thus consumed in one day, in this novel kind of dining room. The tuns in which the beer ferments, hold 1400 barrels each. The carbonic acid in one of them stood about three and a half feet above the liquor, and poured over the side in a continued stream. A candle is instantly extinguished on being placed near the outer edge of this receptacle, and on holding one's face near it, a sharp pungent sensation is felt in the mouth and fauces, not unlike that produced by ardent spirits. An immersion of a few moments would be sufficient to occasion a suspension of voluntary motion.

One hundred and sixty horses are kept on the premises, for the purpose chiefly of transporting the materials to and from different parts of the city. A finer collection of animals employed in one concern, I imagine, is no where to be seen.

This is, upon the whole, I believe, the largest brewery in London. It formerly belonged to Thrale, the friend of Dr Johnson, who, as executor to the estate, sold the establishment to its present owners. One of the latter informed a friend of mine, that the Doctor, in treating with them for the purchase, remarked in his characteristic manner—"Gentlemen, it is not merely these boilers and these vats that I am selling you, but the potentiality of acquiring wealth, beyond the dreams of avarice."

CRANIOLOGY.—"A medical acquaintance of Dr S. the anatomical lecturer, had taken a guide to conduct him to the top of one of the mountains, and while exploring the summit, the guide happening to pull off his bonnet, to scratch his head, exposed to the alarmed vision of the doctor, the organ of murder, very strongly developed. With the greatest caution, the doctor watching his opportunity, slipped from the guide, and took to his heels down the mountain leaving the astonished man utterly at a loss to account for such a strange proceeding."

JAMES MONTGOMERY.—His person is rather beneath the middle size, his countenance open, and he has an elevation of forehead, and a fulness and tenderness of eye, which my imagination could not but regard as an appropriate seat of that pathos of religious feeling, which spreads through his poetry, its most attractive and endearing quality. His manners are gentle and modable, and his style of conversation is animated, seasoned with playful wit, and a great readiness in giving his thoughts the clothing of perspicuous and appropriate language. Montgomery is about 47 years of age.

Sketches of Uncommon Characters.

WASHINGTON.

The person of George Washington was uncommonly tall. Mountain air, abundant exercise in the open country, the wholesome toils of the chase and the delightful scenes of rural life, expanded his limbs to an unusual, but graceful and well proportioned size. His exterior suggested to every beholder the idea of strength, united with manly gracefulness. His form was noble, and his port majestic. No man could approach him without respect. His frame was robust, his constitution vigorous, and he was capable of enduring great fatigue. His passions were naturally strong; with them was his first contest, and over them his first victory. Before he undertook to command others, he had thoroughly learned to command himself.—The powers of his mind were more solid than brilliant. Judgment was his forte. To vivacity, wit and the sallies of a lively imagination, he made no pretensions. His faculties resembled those of Aristotle, Bacon, Locke, and Newton; but were very unlike those of Voltaire. Possessed of a large proportion of common sense, directed by a sound practical judgment, he was better fitted for the exalted stations to which he was called, than many others, who to a greater brilliancy of parts, frequently add the eccentricities of genius.

Truth and utility were his objects. He steadily pursued and generally obtained them. With this view he thought much, and closely examined every subject on which he was to decide, in all its relations. Neither passion, party spirit, prejudice, ambition nor interest, influenced his deliberations. In making up his mind on great occasions, many of which occurred in which the fate of the army or nation seemed involved, he sought for information from all quarters, resolved the subject by night and by day,* and examined it in every point of view. Guided by these lights, and influenced by an honest and good heart, he was imperceptibly led to decisions which were wise and judicious.—Perhaps no man ever lived who was so often called upon to form a judgment in cases of real difficulty, and who so often formed a right one. Engaged in the busy scenes of life, he knew human nature, and the most proper method of accomplishing proposed objects. Of a thousand propositions, he knew to distinguish the best, and to select among a thousand the individual most fitted for his purpose.

As a military man he possessed personal courage, and a firmness which neither danger nor difficulties could shake. His perseverance overcame every obstacle; his moderation conciliated all opposition; his genius supplied every resource. He knew how to conquer by delay, and deserved true praise by despising unmerited censure. Inferior to his adversary in the numbers, the equipment and discipline of his troops, no great advantage was ever obtained over him, and no opportunity to strike an important blow was ever neglected. In the most ardent moments of the contest, his prudent firmness proved the salvation of his country.

The whole range of history does not present a character, on which we can dwell with entire unmixed admiration. His qualities were so happily blended, and so nicely harmonized, that the result was a great and perfect whole.

* In a letter to gen. KNOX, written after the termination of the revolutionary war, Washington observes—"strange as it may seem, it is nevertheless true, that it is not till lately I could get the better of my usual custom of ruminating, as soon as I awoke in the morning, on the business of the ensuing day; and of my surprise at finding, after revolving many things in my mind, that I was no longer a public man, or had any thing to do with public transactions."

BARON STEUBEN.

After General Arnold treacherously deserted his post at West Point, the Baron never failed to manifest his indignation and abhorrence of his name and character, and while inspecting colonel Sheldon's regiment of light horse, the name of Arnold struck his ear. The soldier was ordered to the front, he was a fine looking fellow, his horse and equipments in excellent order—"Change your name, brother soldier, you are too respectable to bear the name of a traitor."—"What name shall I take, general?" "Take any other name, mine is at your service." Most cheerfully was the offer accepted, and his name was entered on the roll as Steuben. He or his children now enjoy land given to him in the town of Steuben by the Baron.

This brave soldier met him after the war. "I am well settled, general," said he, "and have a wife and son. I called my son after you, Sir."—"I thank you my friend, what name have you given the boy?" "I called him Baron; what else could I call him?"

* * * * * *

At the siege of Yorktown the Baron was in the trenches at the head of the division, and received the first overture of Lord Cornwallis to capitulate. At the relieving hour next morning, the Marquis de la Fayette approached at the head of his division, to relieve him. The Baron refused to quit the trenches, assigning as a reason the etiquette in Europe, that the offer to capitulate had been made during his tour of duty, and that it was a point of honour of which he would not deprive his troops, to remain in the trenches till the capitulation was signed or hostilities recommenced. The dispute was referred to the commander in chief, and the Baron was permitted to remain till the British flag was struck. While on this duty the Baron perceiving himself in danger from a shell thrown from the enemy, threw himself suddenly into the trench; Gen Wayne in the jeopardy and hurry of the moment fell on him; the Baron, turning his eyes, saw it was his brigadier. "I always knew you were brave, general," said he, "but I did not know you were so perfect in every point of duty; you cover your general's retreat in the best manner possible."

* * * * * *

The Baron was rough as the ocean in a storm, when great faults were committed: but if in a sudden gust of passion, he had injured, the redress was ample. I recollect, that at a review near Morristown, a Lieut Gibbons, a brave and good officer, was arrested on the spot, and ordered into the rear, for a fault, which it afterwards appeared another had committed. At a proper moment, the commander of the regiment came forward and informed the Baron of Mr Gibbons' innocence, of his worth, and of his acute feelings under this unmerited disgrace. "Desire Lieut. Gibbons to come to the front, colonel." "Sir," said the Baron to the young gentleman, "the fault which was made, by throwing the line into confusion, might in the presence of an enemy, have been fatal. I arrested you as its supposed author, but I have reason to believe that I was mistaken, and that in this instance you were blameless. I ask your pardon; return to your command; I would not deal injustly by any, much less by one whose character as an officer is so respectable." All this passed with the Baron's hat off, the rain pouring on his venerable head!—Do you think there was an officer, a soldier who saw it, unmoved by affection or respect? Not one."

MADAME CATALANI.—There can scarcely be a greater illustration of the extraordinary and powerful effect of the voice of this wonderful performer in the national song of "Rule Britannia," than the following circumstance. Some years ago, as Captain Montague was cruising off the coast of Brighton, he gave a brilliant fete on board his frigate, to which, with many other ladies, Madame Catalani was invited. The Captain went in his launch on shore, manned by more than twenty men, to escort the ladies on board. The fair freight was soon embarked, and the boat was cutting its way simply through the waves to the ship, when Madame Catalani, without any previous notice, and with all her immense power, commenced the air of "Rule Britannia." Had a voice from the great deep spoken, the effect could not have been more instantaneous or more powerful. The sailors not knowing whom they were rowing, were so astonished and at the same time so enchanted into inactivity, that they with one accord rested upon their oars, while tears trembled in the eyes of many of them. "You see Madame," said the Captain, "the effect which their favorite air has upon these brave seamen, above all when it is sung by the finest voice in the world. I have been in many victorious battles, but I have never felt any excitement equal to the present." On arriving on board, sailors who had been in the boat spoke so highly the treat they had received to their comrades, that one and all of them entreated Madame Catalani to repeat the song. She complied with the request with an increased effect, and with so much good nature, that when she quitted the ship, they cheered her until she reached the shore.

NEW-JERSEY.

On the 17th of April, 1702, the proprietors of East New-Jersey, and of West New Jersey, surrendered their right of government to Queen Anne, and the two provinces unitedly assumed the original name, New Jersey. The Governors of New-York were appointed the Governors of this Province, from the time of the surrender, to the year 1738. The following are the names of those who have officiated in that capacity, from 1702, to the present period, with the years in which each were appointed:—

Edward Viscount Cornbury	1702
John Lord Lovelace	1708
Richard Ingoldsby	1709
Robert Hunter	1710
William Burnet	1720
John Montgomerie	1728
William Cosby	1731
John Anderson, President of Council, officiated 14 days.	5
John Hamilton, do. from 1736 to	1737
Lewis Morris	1738
John Reading, President of Council	1746
Jonathan Belcher	1747
John Reading, President of Council	1757
Francis Bernard	1758
Thomas Boone	1760
Josiah Hardy	1761
William Franklin	1763
William Livingston	1776
William Paterson	1791
Richard Howell	1794
Joseph Bloomfield	1801
John Lambert, President of Council	1802
Joseph Bloomfield	1803
Aaron Ogden	1812
William S. Pennington	1813
Mahlon Dickerson	1815
Isaac H. Williamson	1816

In case of death or absence of the Governor, the Vice President of Council officiated as Chief Magistrate.

MARRIAGE IN FRANCE.

A fellow who had a miserable annuity, barely sufficient of itself for his existence, being naturally an epicure, and consequently fond of good cheer, which is not to be got often (unless by a good income,) found out a singular expedient to be at a wedding feast and luxuriate every day of his life. He dressed in black in an appropriate manner, and every morning he was busily engaged in running from the church of St. Eustatius and St Paul, St Sulpicius, or St. Roch—in short, in going about to all the churches of the great parishes. When he saw a wedding, where the train was a little numerous, he mixed himself with the rest, and on some days he had a choice of parties; for it often happens at some of the churches, that three or four couples are married in the same hour. At the end of the service always begins the indispensable feast, which is held ordinarily at some traiteur's. It is the custom that the relations of the husband, and also those of the wife dine at the same table, where they often see each other for the first time. Our gourmand would march in the train, and sit down with the rest, and all having seen him at the service, he was thought by the relations of the wife to belong to the husband's party, whilst the relations of the husband believed him to belong to the party of the wife. Thus he enjoyed himself perfectly at ease, in his equivocal part, throwing out light compliments to one side or the other; and it may be conceived that by his practice he had attained a finished style for the occasion. This practice had lasted him for between four and five years, when on one occasion a relation, upon it chanced had met our habit noir for the third time at a wedding place in eight days, ventured to ask him after the desert had been brought, to which side he belonged? "To the other side of the door," he replied, paying down his plate and walking off The thing was then made known, and the habit now disappeared ever after, or else conducted himself more cautiously.

European Intelligence.

The new and fast sailing ship Diamond, capt. Macey, has arrived at New York, in 23 days from Liverpool. By this arrival, the Editors of the Commercial Advertiser have received London papers of the 15th of October, and Liverpool of the 19th.

It was before certain that Cadiz was in the possession of the French, and that Ferdinand had arrived at the head quarters of the Duke d'Angoulême, on his way to Madrid—but we were left without the particulars of the events attending the surrender of that place—emphatically the last citadel of European freedom. That deficiency is now in a measure supplied; but the heart bleeds at the recitals, and humanity shudders at the prospect. The Cortes, it appears made no terms, and the King and royal family left Cadiz, and joined the French, because the confusion and dismay were such that no one had authority to prevent them. The French troops entered the city on the third—three days after the King had joined his "august cousin;" and the Paris papers say they were received with the most extravagant demonstrations of joy, although the militia had closed the gates, and refused to open them until after the positive commands of the king. Couriers had been despatched to all the corps of the Army, with letters from the King of Spain, ordering them to lay down their arms. One account states that sixty members of the Cortes, voted to restore the King to his former powers; and that in consequence they will receive the royal clemency.—Fifty thousand French troops are to occupy Spain until tranquillity shall have been restored. The Regency has of course been dissolved On concluding their labours, they issued an address "remarkable for the curious inflation of its style and sentiment." When the courier arrived in Madrid, with the news of the capitulation of Cadiz, he cried out as he reached the city, "The King is free and all the Royal family!" and the universal cry from one end of the town to the other, was "Long live the Bourbons"

In a decree dated at Xeres, October 4, it will be found, for the better security of his majesty's person, while journeying back to Madrid, no deputy of the Cortes, for the two last years, may approach within five leagues of the road, and all ministers, counsellors of state, and all persons of note who held offices under the Constitution, are prohibited from ever entering the capital or approaching within 15 leagues. Riego has been condemned to death, but this was the act of the Regency.

The effect of these events at Cadiz, on the troops and inhabitants of Catalonia, are not known, though it is said Mina will keep the field, and hold out till the last. It is also said that he had written to the Regency, previously to its dissolution, that the lives of a French lieutenant, of a great number of superior officers, and of two Bishops, who are in his power, shall answer for that of Riego. A deep interest is felt for that part of Spain, and for Mina, Milans, Rotten, Ulderas, the brave commanders, who almost alone are entitled to our praise, and whose fate will probably excite the sympathies of the public. If the example set by the force in Catalonia and its leaders, had been followed in the rest of Spain, we should not now have to speculate on the degree of justice and mercy to be expected at the hands of Ferdinand. Besides Barcelona, Lerida, Hostalrich, and Tarragona, and the Seu d'Urgel, are in the hands of the Constitutionalists in Catalonia. There are also on the coasts of the Mediterranean the strong fortresses of Carthagena and Alicant, and the minor one of Peniscola, yet unsubdued; and Ceuta, the impregnable fortress opposite Gibraltar is also garrisoned by a Constitutional force. On what terms these places will surrender, remains to be seen. But from this picture of human wretchedness, where bigotry and pusillanimity, united with cowardice and treachery, seem to have done their worst, we turn our eyes to Greece, where we find enough to warm and animate every patriotic bosom Having witnessed with melancholy disappointment, the want of principle and energy in the Spanish population, it is with feelings of indescribable satisfaction that we direct the attention of the reader to a subsequent article detailing the overthrow of the third and greatest expedition of the Turks against the Morea. The death of the celebrated Greek Chief Bozzaris, is an event deeply to be deplored; but he fell on the bed of glory, and his last exploit seems not to have a parallel since Gideon and his little band, armed in the panoply of the Almighty, rushed upon the sleeping camp of the legions of Moab. In addition to the interesting narrative referred to, it is said that the Greeks have brought the Musselmen to a bloody battle between Thebes and Gitani, in which the latter lost 4000 men in killed and wounded, and 400 prisoners In a second battle at Maratin, near Volo, the Turks lost 600 prisoners, although their army was 15000 men, and that of the Greeks only 7000. The Musselmen, after the action, were obliged to retire towards Thessaly, and take refuge in Larissa. These splendid successes of the Greek arms, it is supposed, will have a powerful effect upon the policy of the European Cabinets.

THE NEW POPE.—Cardinal Della Genga was elected Pope on the 27th of September, and has taken the title of Leo XII. He is an Italian, born at the Castle of Della Genga, 3d of August, 1760 The Journal des Debats says he is a man of great learning, accustomed to business, and of irreproachable morals. He was Nuncio during 14 years in the electorates of the Rhine. At the period of the persecutions exercised by Bonaparte against the Head of the Church, he was obliged to quit Rome with the other Prelates and Cardinals born out of the states which remained to the Sovereign Pontiff. At the epoch of the restoration, he was sent by the late Pope, (Pius VII.) to congratulate Louis 18th, on his return, and he was afflicted at Paris with a long illness. In 1815 he was reinstated with the Roman purple At the moment of his nomination he was Cardinal Vicar, that is, administrator, as regards spiritual affairs of the diocess of Rome.

The Liverpool paper of the 18th of October, announces in the postscript of a letter from Whitby, Oct. 16, "that the discovery ships of Captain Parry, are just passing the Roads apparently all well."

The surplus of the Consolidated Fund for the present quarter is ascertained to be £3,803,703; and that of the present quarter's revenue, over the corresponding quarter, £565 113.

A London paper states that the next novel of the Great Known Unknown, will appear in November. The scene lies in Scotland, and the period of time chosen for the action, is about 40 years back.

The increase in the revenue at the port of Liverpool, for the quarter ended on the 10th October over the corresponding quarter in 1822, was £96,400.

At the late great musical festival at Liverpool, the entire receipts exceeded £6000; the expences were between 4 and £5000

The ex Emperor Iturbide is now at Pisa, with a numerous suite.

Mr. Beckford, who lately sold Fonthill Abbey, is at Bath, near which place he has purchased the enormous hill called Lansdown Hill, and workmen are already employed in making improvements. Mr. B.'s conduct in this new project is marked by the same traits which he exhibited at Fonthill Abbey.

IRELAND.—In relation to the affairs of this unhappy country, the London Morning Chronicle of September 24 says:—We understand the Noble Marquess at the head of his Majesty's Government in Ireland has communicated to the King's Ministers, that with the lengthening of the nights, he has reason to expect a renewal of those scenes of desolation and horror which took place in that devoted country during the last year; and that Ministers are busied with the digestion of measures which, without endangering the stability of the system which necessarily engenders all the atrocities, may have the effect of restraining them within certain bounds."

GREECE.

Greece is every day consummating her freedom by acts of devoted bravery and the most intrepid heroism; as if she awoke from a night of ages, she has sprung from the earth on which she lay, and, like a giant starting from his slumbers, astonished all Europe by her successful efforts.—The fourth expedition of the Moslem against her, has been scattered by her gallant bands in dismay, and the followers of the Crescent wander, in bloody disarray, over the fields the tyranny of ages had depopulated and laid waste. The freedom of Greece is no longer doubtful—it is now certain and assured; no effort the barbarous Ottoman can make, will be able to disturb it; the Greeks are superior (to the rabble crowd of their oppressors, in every thing that can constitute a military force, and the sceptre of the Turk over classic Greece, is broken in his ruthless hands for ever. The last campaign of the Ottoman was intended for utter extermination in the Morea; the Pachas were not to attack, but with their united force, so as to make victory, as they thought, certain; and they were then to make the onset with their conjoined hordes, in Livadia, Acarnania, and Negropont. The cruel but trembling Moslems shrunk from a single encounter with the Hellenites, even with superior forces. As a commencement of the campaign, Mehmed, the Seraskier of Romelia, invaded Attica and Livadia with 27,000 followers, but did not dare to attack Odysseus or Nikitas, though they had only nine to ten thousand men to oppose to him. He waited the support of the Pachas of Scutari and Larissa, and the cooperation of Jussuf, who at the head of fourteen thousand men, was to force Macrimoros, and advance to Missolonghi, from whence, with the aid of the Turkish fleet, he was to pass into the Peleponesus; while Mehmed, with 40,000 bandits, was to attack the Isthmus of Corinth, and march on the Morea after having ravaged Livadia The Greeks, on their part, perfectly aware of the designs of their enemies, took instant measures to attack the Pachas in detail, and beat them separately The brave Bozzaris was to oppose Jussuf Pacha; Stornaris was charged with arresting the progress of the Pacha of Scutari in the mountains of Agrafa; while Odysseus and Nikitas destroyed Mehmed's corps, before his union with the others; Colocotroni was to protect the Isthmus with a corps of reserve, and move wherever his presence became necessary. The important field of San Lucca, which was fatal to the Turks, and where the forces of Mehmed were destroyed by Odysseus and Nikitas, produced revolt among Jussuf's mercenaries, and the Pacha could scarce save himself by flight. Stornaris, on his part, was almost equally successful; not content with retarding the march of the Pacha of Scutari, who had with him 8,000 men, he pressed him continually in front, with the loss of more than two thousand of his followers, and harassed him incessantly; nor would he have left him pass the mountains of Agrafa, but for a reinforcement of 4,000 Turks, who suddenly came to his aid: thus supported, their united bands arrived at Capenissi, where the Pacha of Larissa impatiently awaited them with the wrecks of the shattered army of Mehmed.—The two Pachas, obliged to take the field, and wishing to accelerate their march in the hope of passing into Livadia, to act with Jussuf's troops the revolt of which they did not yet know, set out on the 26th of August at the head of 18,000 men, their advanced guard of 12,000 being commanded by Djeladik Bey; he arrived and halted at Lapi on the 27th; there he found himself suddenly threatened by a corps of 2,500 Hellenians, occupying an entrenched camp, and who were in full march against him. The Bey remained inactive that day gaining information as to the strength of the Hellenians, and waited the next day to attack them. Their General, Caesir Cachi, was sick, and they were hesitating as to what they should do, when the brave Bozzaris arrived, and his unexpected presence restored all their courage. This gallant chief having nothing more to fear at Macrinoros, on the first accounts reaching him of the direction taken by the Pacha of Scutari, set out with 340 Suliotes, traversed Etolia and Locris rapidly, and after a few days found himself in Thessaly, where he was apprised of the plans of its chiefs to unite with the Greek forces. Having at last joined the latter, he learned their resolution not to suffer the forces of the Pacha, however numerous, to penetrate into Livadia; but Bozzaris representated to them the danger of giving battle to an enemy so superior in force, and communicated to them his own project to fall that very night on the Turkish camp; "We can surprise them," said he, "for they do not expect to be attacked; and you know that these barbarians never take any precautions against surprise I have with me 340 Suliotes, and I will, at their head, enter the Turkish camp with no others arms but our pistols and sabres. Do you," said he to the Hellenians, "present yourselves in four different points, and commence your fire when we are recognized, so as to distract the Turks; and, if you second me, we will seize the Pacha, alive or dead," The Greeks applauded the daring proposition of the hero, and confided to him the perilous execution. At midnight Marco Bozzaris demanded a further reinforcement of one hundred chosen men to be united to his Suliotes, and having divided the rest of the corps into four detachments, the entire waited the moment of action on the first signal. Bozzaris, in separating from the other chiefs, said, "My friends, if we scatter, you will be sure to find me round the tent of the Pacha" In effect the attack was made: the Turkish Camp completely surprised; the Pacha was seized in his tent by the hero, who, after surrounding it with his followers, taunted the infidels, and clutched their chief as his prisoner.—The hero, however, fell in the arms of victory, mortally wounded by a Moor; but his devoted followers bore him off, and the Pacha was slain. The last words of the dying chief were worthy of Leonidas:—"My friends," said the expiring hero, "to die for liberty is a pleasure, and not a pain.—Freedom is never acquired but at great sacrifices: I die content, because I have contributed to the independence of my country. Continue your services to her, and do not quit your arms but amid the destruction of your enemies." This is a record of heroism worthy of any age or clime, however distinguished or glorious. In former days the genius of the poet would have immortalized it in eternal song, and it would have lived forever in the page of history: but even now it does not perish, and Greece will preserve the name of Bozzaris high in the list of her departed heroes. With such defenders, that delightful land—where almost every spot is precious by a thousand glorious recollections—never can be enslaved. She must be free: and, what is better, she deserves her liberty, and will win it by the heroism of her own brave sons.

FROM CADIZ, &c.

The Boston Centinel of Saturday, gives the following interesting extract of a letter, dated Gibraltar, Oct. 2.

"We have important news.—The gates of the Temple of Janus are again shut in Europe. Cadiz has surrendered, and Ferdinand is at liberty.—Every thing at St. Marys was in exstacy. The king was received by his cousin the Duke d'Angoulême, and the Duke del Infantado, President of the Regency, with every demonstration of respect and festivity. He will set off immediately for Madrid. We have nothing of the fate of the Cortes. Many of them must, it is said, emigrate to avoid assassination or persecution. The French will allow them an asylum on board their fleet. The Royalists are all on the tip toe, and are extremely vindictive, and the Constitutionalists as much chop fallen.—The former expect the commencement of a new era in the affairs of Spain with the revival of commerce, manufactures, the arts and agriculture, and also, the restoration, with French aid, of the Colonies! All the fortresses which have held out were only waiting the events of Cadiz to capitulate. The most unhappy men in this state of things are the infatuated French outlaws and emigrants, who have taken a very active part in the hopeless war. Almost every man of reflection whatever his political feelings, and who has had an acquaintance with the dispositions and habits of the great mass of the Spanish nation, has calculated that the war would end with the campaign, and that there was not the smallest chance of the existence of any successful opposition to the French. But these people have made different calculations, and their disappointment has been great. They must fly to America or England. It is calculated that nine-tenths of the Spanish people, including the peasantry, have seen with pleasure an order of things established by the bayonet, put down by the sword. It is thought that neither Despotism nor Inquisition will be re-established in Spain, and that Ferdinand will be advised to give a Constitution worthy of the age. The terms granted to Cadiz are not yet known and it is not thought that the British government has had any agency in the result, as the Sappho, which is supposed to have brought the ultimatum, did not arrive here until the day after the surrender."

The war in Spain, says the editor, may be considered as at an end; and the French troops after a campaign of six months, will probably eat their Christmas dinner in France. The Spanish King is at liberty, and free to bestow on Spain any Constitution he may choose. This done, the French commanders are bound by their word of honor to quit Spain. The eight or ten fortresses which have so manfully held out against the invaders, will very likely be ordered by the king to open their gates, and will obey The peace news from Spain for a time must be nearly as interesting as the war news have been.

FROM A LONDON PAPER.

THE BONAPARTE FAMILY.

I visited the Villa Paulina—Pauline's own residence when she is at Rome It is quite a bijou—The busts of all her family were there, with Napoleon's at their head, and several miniatures—That of Murat's son is among the number—a fine looking young man. Every thing was shown to us, to the inside of a writing desk. We saw her bed room, with every kind of convenience and luxury; a bath among the number. The bed was remarkably narrow and short—I am sure its length was under five feet. Every thing on her toilet was just as she had left it; and had not my days of gallantry passed away, I could have helped myself to some of the beautiful hair of the lovely Pauline, which was still remaining in the brushes. It is said her hair hangs on the ground when she stands up. She is still at Pisa, wretchedly ill.—Her mother is here, as is Louis. Jerome has lately arrived to take up his residence in the palace of Lucien, which the latter quits, as he is about to leave Europe for America, and is selling off all his property preparatory to his departure. He himself lives just now at Bologna, but his son Carlo is here, a fine, fair-faced, good humored, good looking young man. Jerome seems sickly and careworn, and Louis is old. They appear to associate chiefly among themselves, and I believe are individually much attached to each other. Lucien, it is said, is far from being in good circumstances, having spent a great part of his fortune; and, I am told, that the principal part of Louis's was confiscated in Holland, after the re-establishment of the present orders of things. Pauline is much pressed for money, and in fact their wealth has been much exaggerated Madame Mere, however, is said to be comfortably off. Miss Patterson, Jerome's first wife, was here two years ago. I was told they met, by design or accident, on the high road; but I know not if they spoke. He has a crown on all his carriages, with an I under it. Having occasion to speak to a stable attendant where his horses stood, and calling him Principe, I was corrected by this person, who said, "Re Jerome, ere Re"—to which I of course assented.

LOSS OF THE ROYAL OAK.

On the 11th of October, the brig Royal Oak, Thomas Darnley, commander, belonging to North Shields, sailed from Quebec, bound to Hull On the morning of the 14th, being abreast of the Seven Islands, a strong gale sprung up from the N. E. which, at meridian, increased with great violence, accompanied with rain and snow. At 6 o'clock, P. M. they were compelled to lie under her main sail, and while in this situation several heavy and tremendous seas struck her, which drove the boats out of their chocks, carried away the bulwarks, and destroyed most of the stanchions; at 8 P. M. the sea broke over her fore and aft, sounded the pumps and found three feet water in her hold; all the hands were immediately set to the pumps.—All midnight the gale still increasing and extremely dark, they shipped another heavy sea which caused the vessel to become unmanageable and water-logged. The captain, second mate and carpenter were, at this time, in the cabin, endeavouring to secure the provisions and sails, the mate and three hands were on deck at the pumps and the remainder of the crew were waiting under the companion hatch to take their respective spells at the pumps, when the vessel suddenly turned over on her broad side. The captain, carpenter, and two boys saved themselves by hanging on the weather side of the cabin; the second-mate, one boy with the cook, who were also in the cabin, were drowned. The remainder of the crew made to the main-rigging. The vessel continued on her broadside about ten minutes, when the foremast going by the board, and the bowsprit separating, she righted.

The captain, carpenter, sail-maker and two boys made their way to the companion ladder and endeavoured to gain the fore-castle, which the remainder of the survivors had reached; but a heavy sea striking the vessel, washed the two boys overboard and they were drowned; the others succeeded in joining their comrades, whom they found to be the mate and three seamen. In this distressing situation they passed the night, and at 8 A. M. reduced by debility and exhausted with the effects of the intense cold, two of the seamen dropped dead, and were immediately washed overboard

At noon, the wretched survivors were enabled to reach the main top, where they constructed a shelter with a studding sail and some other materials, which afforded them a more secure protection than the exposed situation of the fore-castle. The captain remained a short time with the other survivors, he then descended upon deck, but had scarcely reached it when he was washed overboard and drowned. On the 16th, the weather became more moderate, which enabled them to descend upon deck for the purpose of obtaining some sustenance; they succeeded in finding a small keg of rum, a cask of water, and a few pieces of beef and pork, which were floating in the wreck. On the 17th they saw a vessel distance about ten miles, which disappeared towards night. On the 18th, thick rainy weather attended with heavy squalls, compelled them to remain the whole day in their shelter. On the 19th they became extremely debilitated, the cold having seized on their limbs, rendered them incapable of any exertion; at about 4 P. M. a vessel hove in sight, which proved to be the Margaret, of Hull, James Creighton, master, who on reaching the wreck, sent out boats, and conveyed the survivors on board the Margaret, where they experienced every attention which their unfortunate situation demanded, and on the twenty-seventh inst. they reached Quebec, and were immediately placed in the Emigrant Hospital, where (thro' the medium of that valuable institution,) they have received the utmost attention and care, and are now in a fair way of recovery. We understand Capt. Darley has left a wife and family to deplore his untimely fate. He was sole owner of the vessel, and has been a constant trader to this port for the last twenty-five years.

LATE FROM LIMA.

Extract of a letter from a Gentleman at Lima, to his Friend in this city, dated

CALLAO BAY, July 23, 1823.

I wrote you by the brig Cora, via New York, and have now this pleasure by the ship Ea, via Baltimore. My last informed you of the capture of Lima, by the Royalists, under General Canterac: I have now to say, that they evacuated that city on the night of the 15th or 16th inst. after destroying the mint. I was in it at the time they destroyed it—Seven al black fellows were employed with sledges, breaking the cast iron wheels, &c and cutting the wrought iron works with chisels—Many families of Lima went off with the army, with all their moveable property. A night or two before they left the city, I walked out with a friend; not a soul was to be seen in the streets—the city was as silent as the grave. We were afraid, when the army would leave the place, before the Patriot troops would enter the city, that the negroes would commit some great depredations, so a parcel of us got together, well armed, to prevent their breaking in upon us. Several Marines, belonging to the English frigate Aurora, were stationed at some of the houses, by permission from Canterac; however, no robberies were committed; the blacks remembered the hot reception they met with when the Patriots left this city; several of them were killed, which intimidated them

A few days ago we experienced a very heavy shock of an Earthquake; it was the most violent shock I ever felt. On the 9th June, there was a violent gale at Valparaiso; 16 vessels were lost, and many lives; that place suffered severely by the earthquake and gale.

Business is extremely dull here at present: sixteen American vessels are now here, doing nothing. American produce is very plenty, and no sale for it. It gives me excessive trouble, when I reflect how long I have been here, and not yet ready to go home and doing a bad business. What a difference there must be between the state of Lima thirty or forty years ago, and the present.—Lima, I presume, was once the most wealthy city in the world, and now it is one of the poorest.

The Royalists treated foreigners very politely; indeed, it was surprising to me that we were allowed to run backward and forward from one army to the other, and all through the Royal camp; and it was a little gratifying to think that we were the only persons allowed that privilege.—The Patriots were much more particular than the Royalists in allowing us to pass.

I have made my home, for some time, on board of the ship Huron, of New Haven; but I shall go up to Lima in a day or two. Sometimes the vessel was full of women and children, at night when it was reported that the Spaniards were going to make an attack upon Callao. One night, some persons paid a doubloon for a boat to carry them off from the shore to the shipping.

The New-York Evening Post tells us that two Banks in the state of Connecticut are engaged in the following new and ingenious mode of banking: "They place in the hands of many brokers in New-York, a capital of one or two hundred thousand dollars, for the purpose of purchasing the notes of all the other banks in the state of Connecticut that are below par in New-York, and then employ an agent to go round with these to the different banks and demand either New York city bank paper, drafts on New-York, or specie. The former they prefer because it immediately and without much risk or trouble, enables them to keep their funds good in the place of traffic, and turn their capital often, which is a great desideratum in trade, and is supposed to yield a profit of 15 per cent per annum.

Advices from the Cape of Good Hope, have been received in London, to the 14th of July—A report had just reached the Cape, that a numerous wandering tribe, or more properly a nation, was on the way South, whose course was marked with the greatest cruelty and devastation. They had advanced as far as Kaffre Land, which borders the frontiers, destroying every thing they encountered, sparing neither man, woman, nor child; in fact, it is said, they resemble a flight of locusts, which consume every thing they rest on. The people composing this nation, are said to be of a much lighter colour than the native Africans, and are supposed to be descendants of some Europeans wrecked on the coast of Africa. They are well armed, and much better equipped than the aborigines of the country. The Grosvenor Indiaman was wrecked about forty years ago, and many of the crew saved. These are supposed to have mingled with a powerful tribe, whence sprang this horde. The reports, however, were by some, supposed to be exaggerated.

On the morning of Monday, the 27th ult. Mrs. Elizabeth Ballard, consort of Captain Benjamin Ballard, of Gates County, (N. C.) rose about the dawn of day, and after conversing a few minutes with her father, Mr. Robert Riddle, at whose house she was on a visit with her husband, stepped into a room where several of the family were sleeping, took a gun, left the house unnoticed, and in an instant the report was heard. The alarm drew the family to the door, within a few steps of which, her body was discovered weltering in blood. It is supposed that she applied her toe to the trigger, and put the muzzle of the gun close to her throat, the lead having passed entirely through, which caused her death instantaneously.

A Frisk's Impudence—About six weeks ago, the store of Captain Kingsbury at New-York, was robbed of various articles of merchandise. Last week it was entered again in the night season, and on the back of a letter directed to Captain Kingsbury, the following message was written and left by the robbers:—"The Devil's compliments to the captain, and informs him that he has taken nothing this time except a jug of brandy, two silver spoons, and a pair of silver candlesticks—but the next time, he will take the captain himself."

England & S. America—In noticing the appointment by the British government, of Consuls to the new states of South America, the Liverpool Courier of the 1st ult. remarks:—"Humanity as to those countries themselves, a strict political justice, and proper respect for our commercial interests, impel and sanction the most prompt and decisive measures on our part. Whether they may ultimately involve us with France is another question. This is not improbable, should Spain be subdued, but we are to look now at what we owe ourselves. Let government pursue the plain straight forward path of doing what is right, and the nation will never be backward to rally round it, and meet the consequences."

A letter received at Charleston, mentions the arrival at Havana, of a Spanish brig from Malaga, which port she left on the 1st September, having on board a large number of Friars, sent off by Gen. Riego.—When they were landed at Havana, the boys hooted at them and pelted them with stones; nor could the populace be quieted until the strangers cried out, "Viva la Constitution!"—when they were allowed to proceed to their lodgings unmolested.

Mr. Beaumont, editor of the "Trifler," a paper published at Kingston, Jamaica, has been tried on an information for a libel on the Duke of Manchester, Governor of that Island. The report of the trial exhibits as striking a proof of judicial arrogance as we have ever seen. The defendant in person concluded his defence, after a thousand interruptions, and was repeatedly cheered on his acquittal by the jury. The Judge and Attorney General were pelted with stones and brick-bats on their return from Court in their carriages.

Novel Suit.—A writ was issued last week, (says the Galaxy,) against the managers of the Boston theatre, in favour of James Allen, Esq. to recover one thousand dollars, in consequence of his being deprived of a seat which he claimed in the theatre on Wednesday evening. Mr. Allen had purchased a ticket in Box No. 19, for Monday evening. Mr. Cooper not having arrived in proper season to perform as had been announced, several persons, and among the rest, Mr. Allen, saw fit to retain their tickets. On Tuesday and Wednesday, (according to the usage in such cases) the managers advertised, that the places taken for Monday night, and not occupied, would be retained for the persons who had taken them till 12 o'clock on Wednesday morning, and that all such places, not retaken by that time, would be sold to whoever might apply. Without availing himself of this notice, Mr. Allen claimed and took his place in No. 19 on Wednesday evening, considerable altercation occurred in consequence between him and the gentleman who had subsequently taken the box. At the end of the second act, they succeeded in excluding Mr. A. who appealed to one of the managers. He was told he might take a seat wherever he could find one vacant, but had no right to claim one which had been sold for that evening. Mr. A. not being satisfied, the manager directed the box-keeper to pay him back his dollar, which he took and departed. The suit above mentioned was instituted the next day.

Casualty.—We are told by the Greenfield Gazette, that Mr. Willard Bridges, a respectable young man in Deerfield, (Mass.) was killed on the 28th ult. in a most shocking manner. He was working at a machine constructed for teazling cloth, when by some means his foot was caught by the band, which passes over the principal perpendicular wheel, so that he could not extricate himself. In this situation he was carried round by the wheel several times, his head in each revolution being struck against the floor with such violence as to be heard a considerable distance, and to induce his wife to suppose she heard the report of a gun. It was some time before the machinery could be stopped, and then life had departed.—His head was literally bruised to a jelly.

Mr. Robert Miller, on his return from Kentucky to Centre County, Pa. was robbed on the 5th inst. near Blair's Gap, of the sum of $5,300, by two men dressed in blue clothes. We observe a reward of $300 offered in the Harrisburg Commonwealth, by Messrs. Valentine & Thomas, of Bellefonte, for the apprehension of the villains, or either of them, and the recovery of the money, which consisted of notes of the Bank United States, Virginia and Pennsylvania, and bills of $5 and $10 on the Auburn Bank of New-York.

TRUE MAGNANIMITY.—Just after Capt. Charles Morris left Portsmouth to take his seat at the Navy Board, to which he has been recently appointed, an article appeared in one of the Portsmouth papers and was copied into the National Intelligencer, in which, from a desire to exalt Capt. Morris, as it would seem, the merit of Com. Hull was rather underprized, in the action between the Constitution and the Guerriere. Upon seeing this article in the Intelligencer, Capt. Morris wrote the following letter to Messrs. Gales & Seaton; it is a noble exhibition of high-minded sentiment; and, as the editors of the Intelligencer justly observe, "however great the merit of Capt. Morris in the action referred to, it did not do him more honor as a man, than the promptitude and frankness with which he has now done justice to the character of Com. Hull."

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29, 1823.

To Messrs. Gales & Seaton,

Gentlemen:—While on my way to this place, I noticed a paragraph, taken from a Portsmouth paper of the 14th inst. (and which I find republished in your paper of the 23d inst.) that contains an undeserved compliment to myself, and detracts from the justly acquired fame of Commodore Hull, in the capture of the Guerriere by the Constitution.

As this paragraph, from its incorrectness, may affect, in the minds of some, the reputation of Commodore Hull, I beg leave to publicly disclaim any other merit, on that occasion, than is properly due an officer in the subordinate situation I then held; and with pleasure avail myself of this opportunity of stating that Com. Hull displayed, on that occasion, in a very eminent degree, all the requisites of a cool, brave and skilful commander, and that he is justly entitled to all the merit which the successful issue of the action can deserve. Your obedient servant. C. MORRIS.

The following calculation is by Mr. Degrand; and is well worthy the attention of every economist:

"Two Argand Lamps, which consume each a gill of Spermaceti Oil, being in all 2 cents worth of Sperm. Oil in an evening, spread as much light as twenty mould tallow Candles, (weighing five lbs.) would, and these candles would burn down one half in the course of the evening: which at the present low price of Candles, viz. 12 cts. per lb makes them cost 30 cents for the 2½ lb. consumed.

"Even if the tallow was given you, is it not doubtful whether it would not be cheaper to burn Sperm Oil, than to pay for the wick and the manufacturing of the tallow candles.

A CARD.—DOCTOR ATLEE, Senior, finds it necessary thus publicly to notice, in order to allay the fears of his friends, and save himself the trouble of being frequently accosted in the street, or elsewhere, that the advertisement in Poulson's paper of his intended Lecture before the Medical Society, was not inserted by him, or with his knowledge. It is customary for one of the Senior members of that Society to lecture on some Medical subject, every night of meeting, and one of the Committee having called on me to know if I was prepared to lecture at the next meeting, and being answered in the affirmative, had the notice inserted, in pursuance of a rule of the society, and dated it in his own way—so that the offensive word "Saturday," is not chargable to the Doctor. This he hopes will suffice.

We have this day given copious details of the news received by late arrivals—they are of a nature highly interesting and important. The surrender of Cadiz, an event now confirmed beyond doubt, has entirely dispelled the hopes that have been entertained of the eventual success and triumph of liberal and enlightened principles. It remains to be seen to what length this system of usurpation and tyranny will now be carried—Emboldened by success, the army of the Faith, with the Holy Alliance at their head, will doubtless persevere in suppressing every remaining spark of liberty; and Spain, degraded into submission, with a foreign army of forty thousand men to watch over and compel her obedience, will operate as a powerful example against any further attempt at introducing a spirit of equality and independence. As it is we can but hope for the best; but the time will be far distant, we fear, before the philanthropist and patriot will be permitted to indulge a prospect so flattering to the best feelings of our nature, as that which lately presented itself, but which pusillanimity, bribery, treachery, and cowardice, have now lost to them forever.

Among our articles of foreign intelligence, it will be seen that Greece, aspiring, fearless Greece, is advancing rapidly to a state of independence and happiness; and that, though Spain may have disappointed the hopes of her friends, the Greeks are realizing the fondest expectations—and after a long, bloody and obstinate struggle, with little or no assistance, they have succeeded in opposing their Turkish tyrants, and are now about taking that exalted rank among the nations of the earth, which their bravery, integrity and sufferings in the cause of freedom, eminently entitle them to. We perceive the "Christian Nations," after looking on, if not with indifference, at least with a degree of tameness and acquiescence equally astonishing and culpable, have now, that victory is theirs, come to the determination of interfering in behalf of the Greeks. We could almost wish this "interference" might meet that reception its tardiness would seem to deserve—but war has been so long ravaging the territories of this interesting nation, and spreading its desolation and misery around, that every friend to humanity must fervently desire, that peace should be obtained as speedily, and, at the same time, as securely as possible, to afford an opportunity of recruiting her wasted and depopulated shores.

The fast sailing ship Minerva, captain Maxwell, arrived at New-York, on the 14th instant, from Liverpool, bringing papers to the 20th October, two days later than our last accounts—they contain nothing of importance. The Minerva has only been sixty-five days absent from port.—She has made two voyages to Liverpool and back in the short period of 5 months and 17 days.

Two public spirited gentlemen have purchased the suite of Washington Hall in this city, which, it will be remembered, was destroyed by fire on the eve of St. Patrick's day, in March last. They have laudably determined to erect thereon, a building that will conduce to public convenience, by furnishing an exhibition and concert room, about 27 feet by 65. The repairs of the Mansion House Hotel adjacent are completed, and the establishment will be speedily opened as an hotel, with extensive accommodations.

The President of the United States returned to Washington city for his winter residence, on the 5th instant.

All the Secretaries of Departments and other principal officers of the government are at their posts, except Mr. Crawford, who is expected daily, he having, when last heard from, reached the seat of Mr. Madison.

The Legislature of Pennsylvania, will meet at Harrisburg, on the first Tuesday of December, and John Andrew Shulze, Governor elect, will be installed into office on the Tuesday following.

NEW-JERSEY LEGISLATURE.

The House of Assembly, have decided against an adjourned session, by a large majority.

It is generally understood that there is a considerable majority in the Assembly, in favour of reducing the legal interest of money to 6 per cent and it is quite probable that an act for this purpose will pass both houses.

There is some talk of investing the School fund in the contemplated Canal through the State, from the Delaware to the Raritan; and of undertaking this enterprize at the risk of the State.

The application of the Salem Steam Mill and Banking Company, for further time to erect their Steam Mill, has been under discussion and occupied some time in the house during the last week. The principal opposers of the bill were Messrs Ewing, White and Elmer, who spoke at length upon the subject; Mr. Dayton from Salem, replied at length and with ability, to all the arguments urged against the bill. It finally passed, granting in part, the object of the petitioners, allowing one year additional time to erect the Steam Mill.

COLOMBIA—PORTO CABELLO.

By the arrival in this port of the Colombian brig of war EAGLE, after a tedious and boisterous passage from La Guayra, we learn that early in October the besieging army under General Paez, with Genl. Bermudez second in command, had made considerable progress in the attack upon Porto Cabello. The town and all the approaches had been taken. The Spanish garrison had been forced to retire to the fortress in the Island, upon which a battery of twenty four guns and two thirteen inch mortars played almost incessantly. On the 5th of October a division of two thousand men, under the command of Colonel Lyster, marched from Caracas to reinforce the besieging army, and Captain Cotteral, of the Eagle, speaks of these troops in terms of the highest admiration as to their appearance and discipline.

Two sloops of war already blockaded the harbour of Porto Cabello, and a naval expedition, to attack the place by sea, was fitting out at La Guayra and Cumana. The ship which had arrived from Holland, is to lend in the expedition—She is a fine ship, one of those built by Napoleon, and carries sixty guns.

Lieut Col. the Hon. Leicester Stanhope, has left London for the Morea, to tender his services to the Greeks. It is stated that several others would soon follow this gentleman in his meritorous expedition.

The Burlington (Vermont) Sentinel, of Friday last, announces the arrival at that "port," among a number of other vessels, of the sloop Gleaner, from Troy, with a cargo of merchandize. Passengers, a gentleman and lady of that town, who left Liverpool on the 8th of September, and have performed the whole distance of their journey by means of a water communication!

FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

TO GOODACRE.

Hail, son of Science! long inur'd
To tour aloft, from world to world,
Amid the starry sky.
Thy flight I view with sweet surprise,
And on thy pinions fain would rise,
'Till taught like thee to fly.

Then, thro' the boundless fields of space,
Where worlds unnumber'd roll apace,
And blazing comets shine,
Like thee, with awe profound I'll view,
The wonders of the ethereal blue,
And own their source divine. B.

FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

THINGS AS THEY SHOULD BE.—No. II.

The treatment of strangers by our citizens, is exemplary. Even our boys are careful on every occasion to vie with the youth of Sparta. No crowding nor thronging after them is noticed, and they had rather lose the use of their tongues, than use abusive language, even to a TURK. This praiseworthy deference to strangers is greatly owing to the unremitted labours of our Societies for the suppression of vice and immorality, and to the proverbial vigilance of our officers of police, who bring to condign punishment all offenders against the sacred laws of hospitality, without respect to persons: not to mention the care of parents generally to instil into the minds of children, the heavenly doctrine of doing unto all men as we would they should do unto us.

The Legislature of our state, it is supposed, in order effectually to put down the small remains of dishonesty still perceptible amongst us, contemplate repealing, at their next session, the BANKRUPT LAW, thus enabling the community to live on their earnings. It is rumoured also that they intend to disqualify for holding any office of honor or profit, any magistrate who shall fraudulently take the benefit of the present Act of Insolvency. OBSERVER.

COMMUNICATION.

"The Spy; or, the Victim of Fidelity."

On Wednesday evening next, a new Drama, never performed, entitled, "The Spy; or the Victim of Fidelity," and written by a gentleman of this city, will be produced at the City Theatre. The Melo Drama is founded on the popular novel of the "Spy," and is totally different in plot and incident, (as we understand,) to the one that has been performed by the name of the "Spy, or, a tale of the Neutral Ground"—being so, we hope a generous public, will not be backward in discovering whether or not it has the same claim to attention.

The evening's entertainment, and positively the last night of the company's performance, prior to their departure for Harrisburg, are for the benefit of Mr. King, a gentleman of erudition and talents. T.

Lines of uncommon beauty from the Literary Gazette

TO ——

'Tis all too true—that faded cheek,
That sunken eye,
Those accents tremulous and weak,
That tear, that sigh—
With idle hope I've watch'd thy brow
From day to day;—
'Tis vain—a little while, and thou
Wilt pass away!

Nay, dear one! cease that soothing look,
That soothing tone,
Thou dost not think that I could brook
To be alone.
Thou wilt not say that I could bear
On this dear spot
To seek thy footstep every where,
And find it not!

The Sun will shine as bright above
In other days:
The Moon we used to watch and love,
Still win my gaze:
The flowers, that shar'd our gentlest care,
May still bloom on,
Our bird pour forth its song; but where
Wilt thou be gone?

Mine eyes must close, where can they seek
For aught so dear?
My lips be mute—why should I speak?
Thou wilt not hear!
So, dearest! cease that soothing look,
That soothing tone;
Thou dost not think that I could brook
To be alone!

DRAMATIC.

The Circus will close for the season in a few nights; arrangements have been making for the reception of the company at Boston, where it is expected they will open at the City Theatre, on the second week in December next. As manager of the establishment, while in Philadelphia, Mr. Cowell has acquitted himself to general satisfaction; and we are confident the public will not soon lose sight of the merits of an actor who in the discharge of his vocation has contributed so largely to their amusements.

The operatic department of the theatre at New-York, has received a great acquisition in the arrival of Mr. Pearman, a singer of considerable celebrity from the Theatres in London. He ranks higher than Phillipps, and his songs are said to be delivered with superior effect. At the Park theatre, on Tuesday evening last, the character of Richard III. was sustained by Mr. Hilson the comedian, after which he performed Jobson in the farce of the Devil to Pay. The African theatre in New-York, which is now open, is said to be crowded almost every night.

At Baltimore, on the same evening as above, Mr. H. Wallack performed Benedict in the comedy of Much ado about Nothing, which, with the farce of the Two Pages of Frederick the Great, he had selected for his benefit. After the play, he gave imitations of Messrs. Kemble, Kean, Booth, Mathews, and J. Wallack. The theatre closes on the 19th. M. Villalave and company are exhibiting their astonishing feats at the Circus in Baltimore.

Mr. Cooper received a very liberal benefit at the Boston theatre on Monday evening last. The performances were the tragedy of Virginius, and the Tale of Mystery, with the Recitation of Alexander's Feast by Mr. Cooper.

Mr. Barrim, the author of Damon & Pythias, has a tragedy prepared for the stage.

Mr. Conway, a celebrated comedian, we learn, is on the eve of leaving England for America.

The London Magazine, for September, describing the performances of Mathews, the comedian, at one of the London theatres, observes—

"The only benefit we have yet gained by Mathews' trip to America is, that he has been forced into the drama, the legitimate drama,—and in the taste of the Yankees, do we owe one of the best pieces of acting on the stage, we mean Morbleu in Monsieur Tonson."

THE OLIO.

"VARIETY'S THE VERY SPICE OF LIFE,
THAT GIVES IT ALL ITS FLAVOUR."

FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

FASHIONABLE HATS.

"I like these hats," a dashing dandy said,
(A logic hat he had upon his head.)
"Above the pate no vacancy is there
To shield the wintry blast, or sultry air;
The rim so large, keeps off the rain with ease:
May he be blest who first made hats like these!"

"I understand," cried out a person near,
"Large rims you think hide beat an ass's ears;
And if a vacancy must be about
Your pate, you like it not to be without;
The reason's plain, (the wag here gave a grin)
Of o..sancy you have enough within." P.

An article in a late British paper, headed "An American Superscription," quotes the following, copied in a post office of one of the Southern states, and challenges "any man to produce a greater curiosity of the kind in any language."

"Mr. M. P. Haney, Alabama—Greene county. I am not sure it is Greene county—it is French settlement, and not far from Tuscaloosa and Mat-thew Gage, I believe; and not far from Dr. Wyllis Pope, I expect."

This is pleasant enough, but we have seen several curiosities of the kind not less so. The day before yesterday we received, from a Northern state, a small pamphlet, under covelope, with the genuine superscription, which we shall proceed to transcribe, suppressing only the name and residence of the writer.

"To the Editor of the National Gazette, Philadelphia, in Pennsylvania—This with care and speede, and to the care of the Post Master and Divine Providence. This here package containes one Little Hymn Book Composed by the Will of God for the use of a Connexion of people, called Christians, by—— ——, the author, who lives in —— I hope that all the post master, will let this go free to the Editor of the National Gazette Philadelphia, for I would pay the postage if I had any money, and so may the grace of God be with you all. Amen."

An estimable lawyer, of our acquaintance, in this city, received a letter some time ago from an old Irish Catholic client in a neighboring state, of which the address ran thus:

"To my dear Counsel——that lives in the street of Philadelphia that I don't know the name of; but I believe it's opposite to the Quaker nunnery."

By the Quaker nunnery, the worthy Hibernian meant the Friend's alms house.—Nat. Gaz.

It is a curious fact, that in Seneca's Medea, the chorus distinctly predicts the discovery of America, which took place 1400 years after that drama was written. In the passage here alluded to, it is said, "A new Tiphys, a son of earth, will, in ages to come, discover remote regions towards the West, and Thule will no longer be the extremity of the Universe."

THE GOTHS AND HUNS.

The terrific honours which these ferocious nations paid to their deceased monarchs are recorded in history, by the interment of Attila, king of the Huns; and Alaric, king of the Goths. Attila died in 453, and was buried in the midst of a large champaign, in a coffin in which was one of gold, another of silver, and a third of iron. With the body were interred all the spoils of the enemy, harness embroidered with gold, and studded with jewels; rich silks, and whatever they had taken most precious in the palaces of the kings they had pillaged; and that the place of his interment might forever remain concealed, the Huns deprived of life all that assisted at his burial! The Goths had done nearly the same for Alaric, in 410, at Cosenza, a town in Calabria. They turned aside the river Vasento; and having formed a grave in the midst of its bed where its course was most rapid, they interred this king with prodigious accumulation of riches. After having caused the river to re-assume its natural course, they murdered, without exception, all those who had been concerned in digging this singular grave.

FROM BROOKE'S TRAVELS TO THE NORTH CAPE.

The puffin or Greenland parrot, called in Norwegian mad, breeds here (Carl oe) in great numbers. The manner of catching them is curious, being by means of small dogs trained to the sport. The puffins sitting together in prodigious numbers in the deep holes and the clefts of the higher rocks, one of these dogs is sent in, which seizes the first by its wing. This to prevent its being carried away, lays hold with its strong beak of the bird next to it, which in like manner seizes its neighbors; and the dog continuing to draw them out, an extraordinary string of these birds falls into the hands of the fowler. They are taken for their feathers, which are valuable.

Potatoe.—The following singular statement is given as a fact in a London paper.—Early Potatoes may be produced in great quantities by re-setting the plant, after taking off the ripe and large ones. A gentleman at Dantzic has replanted the same six different times this season without any additional manure; and instead of falling off in quantity, he gets a larger crop of ripe ones at every raising, than the former ones. His plants have on them three distinct crops; and he supposes they may continue to vegetate and germinate until they are stopped by the frost. By this means he has a new crop every eight days, and has had for six weeks past.

Dr. Mellen's Cough Drops,

The most valuable Medicine ever prepared for COUGHS AND CONSUMPTIONS.

THIS new and healing Balsam bids fair to rival every Medicine heretofore discovered, for Coughs, and consequents of the ungs, leading to Consumption, and even in scated Consumptions have lately been used by many, with the most surprising success. If certificates from persons of the highest respectability, or the great and increasing demand for them, may be called proof of their good effects, it is proved. Scarcely a case of Colds, Coughs, pain in the side, difficulty of breathing, want of sleep, arising from debility, or even Consumptions but may be relieved by the timely use of this Medicine.

I hereby certify that my wife has for some time past been troubled with a violent Cough, and has been in very delicate health, and after having tried many things without getting relief, I bought for her a bottle of DR. MELLEN'S Cough Drops, from the use of which a very short time she found great relief, and her Cough has entirely left her and she has regained her strength.

Hudson, 12 mo. 10th, 1819. JOHN B. JENKINS

Affirmed before me this 20th December, 1819.

JOSEPH D. MONELL, Recorder of the City of Hudson.

To the afflicted whom this may concern, I, ROSANNA BARTON, do certify that I took a violent cold in the latter part of the year 1818, which created a violent cough and difficulty of breathing, which was very distressing till I procured a bottle of Doctor MELLEN'S Cough Drops and by taking a few doses of the said drops, I was entirely cured of my Cough and pain in my side.

Hudson, 12 mo. 13th, 1819.

This is to certify that in June 1818, I was seized with a very distressing Cough, pain in my side, great weakness of the body, which continued until July 1819, and confined me to the house, and part of the time to my bed. I had tried every thing as I thought, but all in vain; I was at last induced to make trial of DR. MELLEN'S Cough Drops, which gave me immediate relief, increased my strength and restored me to my former health. I can with the greatest confidence recommend the same to all those afflicted with those complaints, as a very valuable Medicine. NANCY BOURNE.

Hudson, County of Columbia, State of N. York, Dec. 27, 1819.

These drops generally give ease to most cases of coughs, colds, asthma, difficulty of breathing, wheezing, allaying that irritation which often leads to consumption, pain in the side &c.

BALM OF COLUMBIA,

An Important recent Chemical Discovery.

THE Ladies and Gentlemen of this city and elsewhere, are respectfully informed, that John Oldridge has fortunately discovered, by the power of Chemistry, the grand desideratum of preventing Hair from falling off, in Forty Eight Hours from its first application. This balm, will, most absolutely, in the course of a short time, make the Hair grow Beautiful Thick, and also restores it to a head, if the part is totally bald; likewise makes whiskers and beards grow rapidly. It also cures the Dandruff. J. O. is well aware that many fraudulent and deceptive arts, &c. have been imposed on the public, and therefore prejudice will be severe against his discovery, until tried; shall convince his patrons that such a thing exists in nature as a certain preventative against the loss of Hair. No danger need be apprehended to the human system by the application of this Auxiliary restorative. The public may rest assured that it is perfectly harmless.

It has proved its ability to restore a full head of hair on those who were bald at 20 years of age, in the short time of 6 weeks. On those who were older it was longer in effecting the change, in proportion to age. Any person under forty years of age, may rest assured (provided they do not wear wigs) that this Balm will restore a covering of hair if it is regularly used. The young hair always appears on the skin that was bald in the course of twenty-four days. Though the person who uses it be over sixty, by applying it occasionally it will prevent the hair from falling off.

It is prepared and sold at reasonable rates, at one dollar per bottle, half a bottle fifty cents, by

To Parents and Guardians of Youth,

OF BOTH SEXES.

AFTER a residence of nearly 15 years amongst my fellow citizens of Philadelphia, during which time I have experienced the high gratification of imparting my Art to some thousands of most respectable pupils of both sexes, I again present myself to your notice as a professor and teacher of Drawing and Painting.

By persons moving in the first circles of society, both enlightened and liberal of every class, the Fine Arts can never be considered with indifference, on the contrary, their importance with respect to utility and accomplishment, must be appreciated by every thinking person.

I am happy in stating, that much of an astonishing and rapid attention to my profession, embracing particularly the first principles of the Art, which has enabled me to produce a system infinitely more perfect, more simple, and better suited to the capacities of youth, than any hitherto known; the progress of my pupils will test this assertion. Many having in less than three months, produced specimens superior to the productions of two years upon the old system. I am anxious to extend my instruction upon the same liberal terms. I have established these last three years, being one fourth of the usual charge; and I rely with confidence on the support of an enlightened and discerning public.
